Moldova Union Literature Evangelist Congress

Moldovia Union Literature Evangelist Congress attendees.

The convention, organized by Stanislav Becciu and Pavel Liberanskiy, the publishing directors of the Moldova Union and Euro-Asia Division, respectively, was an inspiring event.

The program focused on two main aspects: seminars and devotional messages emphasized the philosophy and relevance of the publishing work, while workshops provided literature evangelists (LEs) with practical training in sales techniques.

In the afternoons participants had the opportunity to put theory into practice by going out to sell books. During the course of two days they sold more than 350 subscription books, an outstanding achievement.

Moldova is a small country situated between Ukraine and Romania, with a population of 2.5 million. The Adventist Church has 7,500 members, who are actively involved in literature distribution. Each year hundreds of thousands of books, newspapers, and tracts are distributed. The country has approximately 100 full-time and part-time LEs.

Pacific Press Celebrates 150 Years of Proclaiming God's Love

On Sabbath, August 17, 2024, the Pacific Press Publishing Association celebrated its 150th anniversary in an auditorium at Northwest Nazarene University in Nampa, Idaho. The program, themed “Proclaiming God’s Love for 150 Years,” drew 300 past and present Pacific Press workers and supporters to celebrate the press’s enduring mission of uplifting Christ through literature, media, and music.

Presenters highlighted the press’s resilience through trials, including, in 1906, damage from a 7.9-magnitude earthquake and destruction from a fire two months later. The dedicated staff quickly rebuilt and never missed a weekly issue of Signs of the Times, their flagship publication, even producing three special editions linking the earthquake to Jesus’ imminent return.

Charles White, great-grandson of James and Ellen White, press co-founders, shares family memories at Pacific Press's 150-year anniversary celebration, held at Northwest Nazarene University in Nampa, Idaho, on Sabbath, August 17, 2024.

Keynote speakers Ted N.D. Wilson, president of the General Conference (GC), and G. Alexander Bryant, president of the North American Division (NAD), encouraged a similar boldness among believers today. Wilson urged those present to deepen their influence through the daily study of the Bible and the Spirit of Prophecy

Charles White, the great-grandson of Ellen and James White, shared his family's close connection to the press, where his grandfather, father, and a young Charles worked. He fondly remembered worship services, Christmas parties, and camping trips, stating, "[The press] wasn't just a place to work. It was the hub of our community, the heart of what went on, the center of activity."

Two special-edition publications recently highlighted the past and present history of Stanborough Press, the Seventh-day Adventist publishing house based in the United Kingdom.

An anniversary edition of Messenger, the journal of the Adventist Church in the UK and Ireland, brought to the forefront the history of Stanborough Press, which in 2024 is celebrating its 140th anniversary. Likewise, a high-quality booklet shared the history of the publishing house, emphasizing its “140 Years of Service” to the world church. The 54-page booklet was distributed among church leaders and members who attended the September 8 open house and anniversary celebrations at the publishing house, located in Grantham, Lincolnshire, England.

The Southern Asia-Pacific Division held a series of three leadership summits in the Philippines in August 2024.

Each union publishing director oversees the work of 10 to 12 conferences or missions. Across the country approximately 180 area publishing ministries leaders (APMLs) support the work of literature evangelists (LEs) in the field, which is a key strength of the publishing ministry in the region. Additionally, each local conference publishing director works closely with five to six APMLs, who are actively involved in recruiting, training, assisting, and supervising LEs.

There are more than 5,000 LEs in the Philippines.
